

Soon he'll accomplish less of just about everything.

Do you know how much fuel a fleet owner like yourself can save by training your drivers?

A very likely answer is: 10% on average. (Enough to fuel every 10th truck for free.)

At Scania we know this. We've been training Scania drivers for years in many countries and have seen the remarkable effects first-hand.

Of course, less fuel isn't the only thing a properly trained driver will accomplish.

As his vehicle gets driven in a more premeditated, less forceful way, it requires fewer repairs. It's subject to less wear and tear. Tyres last longer. The powertrain lives longer and consumes less oil. The list goes on.

Then there's road safety. A well-trained driver is less likely to become involved in accidents. Apart from saving lives, this means less unplanned downtime and lower insurance premiums.

Also, the environment takes a turn for the healthier.

With less fuel consumed, emissions naturally drop accordingly.

Scania's European driver training programme is as premium as our vehicles. It's complete, hands-on and immensely interactive. Your drivers will find themselves learning from the topmost Scania experts.

The sooner you enrol them, the sooner they can start accomplishing less.

Scania Driver Training. Dedicated all the way. Great training for great drivers.
